

TEXILA'S CERTIFICATE COURSE IN HEALTH ECONOMICS AND HEALTH FINANCING

This course attempts to provide students with the knowledge, skills, and basic economic arguments central to health system financing.

It explains the main models of health system funding, including health insurance and their implications.

WHAT IS HEALTH ECONOMICS & HEALTH FINANCING?

- Health economics and financing are defined as the health system function done with the accumulation and mobilization of resources to manage the health needs of the population, individually and collectively, within the health system.

Interpret different principles and theories of economics and health economics

Describe factors and their functions in the healthcare market, including cost and effectiveness of healthcare

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Illustrate potential contributions of health economics to decision making in the Healthcare market

Analyze economic rationality of government and private healthcare services, schemes, and industry regulations attached to healthcare

DURATION

3 Months with a Certificate upon Completion

CAREER PROSPECTS

Consulting Firms, Contract Research Organizations, Pharmaceutical and Medical Device Companies, Managed Care Organizations, and more.